

New 3-Part Course to Help You Become the Disinfectant Decision Maker in Your Clinic

The National Association of Veterinary Technicians (NAVTA) and Virox[®] Animal Health have joined forces to provide the veterinary technician community with more opportunities to gain a fresh perspective on tasks that are performed numerous times daily in the practice without a second thought – cleaning, disinfecting, and infection prevention.

Together, NAVTA and Virox[®] will launch a 3-part online course titled "If You Only Knew..." available on the new online education portal, ViroxLearning.com. Available exclusively to NAVTA members starting February 6th through to March 6th. Then launching out to our distribution partners March 6th to share with their clients and sales representatives.

This course will look at how the disinfectants used at a veterinary clinic can impact its patients in ways that might not always be so apparent. The first module will touch upon the effect of a cleaning product's scent on the patient's experience (spoiler alert: strong smells can be scary!).

Modules 2 and 3 of the course help veterinary technicians to best navigate the disinfectant landscape and learn how to implement a disinfection strategy tailored to their practice's needs. Each of the 3 modules is approximately 10 minutes in duration. Technicians completing the course will walk away feeling engaged and empowered to take on the critical role of disinfectant decision maker. They will also receive a small swag mailer that will include a Rescue sample, window cling, retractable pen and a Fear Free certification discount code. This certification and knowledge for disinfecting will be a vital role that will go a long way to help keep their clinic and its patients happy and healthy.
